

ACSI is expanding our digital ecosystem by welcoming Sevenstar as part of the ACSI ministry family. Sevenstar has served the Christian education digital space for more than 15 years. This merger joins the existing digital launch of our new ACSI professional development platform powered by Campus.

What does it mean that Sevenstar is a ministry of ACSI?

Sevenstar has served the Christian education digital space for more than 15 years. Sevenstar will now operate legally as a subsidiary of ACSI and be part of the future Digital Initiative projects that ACSI develops. Our heart's desire is to expand Christian education around the world. We are truly stronger together when we work together to achieve the Great Commission and make disciples for Jesus Christ.

Why is this a good collaboration?

This agreement supports our ACCESS pillar. Sevenstar provides online courses primarily to schools that cannot create them for themselves. Our long-term strategy is to mutually develop additional components to our digital ecosystem. ACSI seeks to utilize the expertise and resources of Sevenstar to provide biblically integrated digital education courses and supplemental material to schools and students that may not have local access.

How does this impact the accreditation process of ACSI?

ACSI accreditation visits are completed by peer Christian school educators and will continue to be done that way. Additionally, the ACSI Office of Academic Services has committed to using only non-ACSI employees on accreditation visits to online school members. Member schools and ACSI Accredited schools can continue to use any online provider that meets their student needs.

How does this impact product sales?

While we hope to provide more resources for schools, at this time there will not be any significant impact on ACSI's existing functions. Christian schools and educators have many product options, and that will continue.
